Tut:- Lab:

The main object of the communication final level project is to give the student an opportunity to use the theoretical knowledge he had acquired in solving an engineering problem.

In this way he would develop an engineering sense and the ability to analyze problems and produce solutions taking into account economic and environmental factors.

The communication final level project takes the form of a minor research or development project.

The project must be written in English language.

The student work is supervised by a senior academic staff member. At the end of the second term, the project is completed and a dissertation must be submitted for assessment as part of the requirement for the B.Sc. degree.
